PBSC’s multiple award-winning Family Law Project trains law students to assist vulnerable Canadians in a time of crisis. Many Canadians will experience separation or divorce. Custody of the children, income and property are often at stake. Legal fees are out of reach for most, and the court process is daunting. Despite the complexity of the system, the majority of family litigants have no representation and often no real understanding of their rights and responsibilities. Fortunately, PBSC law students are here to help!

“The best decision I made in law school was to volunteer with PBSC... I assisted clients who could not read or write, victims of domestic violence, and people with absolutely no family or community support.”

– Katerina Svozilova, PBSC Family Law Project Coordinator and Volunteer

PBSC Spearheads New Initiatives to Support Self-Represented Litigants!

PBSC’s Windsor Chapter has launched The Family Law Coaching Project in partnership with the National Self-Represented Litigants Project. Through this innovative project, Windsor law students provide self-represented litigants with one-on-one legal information, support in preparing for the court process and referrals to community resources.

PBSC Saskatchewan has partnered with the Government of Saskatchewan to launch the Ministry of Justice Family Law Initiatives Project. Volunteers support self-represented clients of the Family Legal Assistance Clinic through delivery of PLEs, assistance in using the PLEIS website and document drafting.
